COACH—Lou Carnesecca

ROY BOE
PRESIDENT

Roy Boe, 40-year-old graduate of Yale University, is president of the New York Nets.

It is under his aegis that the Nets a year ago gained the American Basketball Association playoffs for the first time. It was Boe, too, who signed Lou Carnesecca, dynamic coach of St. John's University, to a five-year contract and who obtained super-star Rick Barry from the Virginia Squires in one of the biggest transactions in the ABA's four-year history.

In addition, it was Boe who brought the Nets to Island Garden where, in one year, they drew 100,000 more fans than they had at either Teaneck, N.J., in their first season as the New Jersey Americans or at Long Island Arena, Commack, N.J., the second season.

His big goal, of course, is to put the Nets in the new 15,000-seat Nassau Coliseum next season.

Boe was born in Brooklyn, attended Englewood School in New Jersey, then matriculated at Yale, where he graduated with the class of 1951.

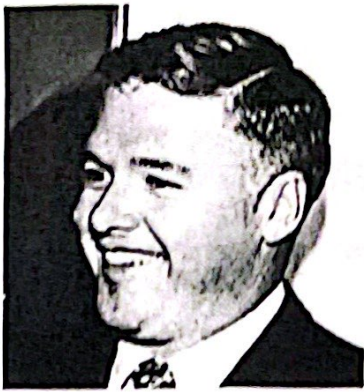

At Englewood he was a catcher on the baseball team and an end in football. He continued with both sports as a freshman at Yale, but his collegiate sports career ended abruptly when he broke an arm while a member of the Eli football jay vees.

After 13 months with the U.S. Military forces in Korea, winding up as a first lieutenant in the artillery, Roy became a food broker. That was 1953 and that year, too, he wed a young lady from Cincinnati—Deon Woolfolk.

It was while still a food broker that he walked into a Darien, Conn., dress shop with his wife in 1961 to have the owner of the shop admire the skirt Mrs. Boe was wearing. That was the beginning of Boe Jests, the women's apparel firm that Boe catapulted into a multi-million dollar operation.

The Boes live in Darien with their five children—Tinker 15, Sam 13, Mandy 12, Jeremy 9 and Tod 6.

To keep fit, Boe plays squash tennis almost daily.

MIKE MANZER

VICE PRESIDENT --- SALES & PROMOTION

Manzer, a dynamic young executive, previously was associated with Hofstra University, his Alma Mater, joining the Hofstra Development staff in 1965 and serving as Director of the Alumni Fund, Annual Giving Fund and general Hofstra University Fund before being promoted to Coordinator of Development.

When Hofstra added AstroTurf and permanent night lighting in a $400,000 stadium improvement program, he accepted additional duties as Stadium Manager and then helped arrange for the New York Jets to establish their Summer training headquarters at Hofstra.

Mike, a graduate of Hofstra, served as an officer in the U.S. Marine Corps for three years, then went on to earn his Master of Business degree at Adelphi in 1968.

Presently, he resides in North Massapequa with his wife Sally and their four children.

BARNEY KREMENKO

PUBLICITY DIRECTOR

A sportswriter for the New York Journal American through the full 29 years of that newspaper's duration, Kremenko is a native of Brooklyn.

He studied at both Long Island and New York Universities, getting his degree from NYU, but started working for newspapers even before then.

Barney is a former chairman of the New York Chapter, Baseball Writers' Association, as well as having been an officer in the Professional Football Writers and Hockey Writers Associations.

He was official scorer for the 1954 World Series between the New York Giants and Cleveland Indians as well as for the All-Star game at Yankee Stadium in 1960.

With the Journal American, he won numerous awards in the Hearst national organization for outstanding sports writing.

Four years ago, he turned to public relations, a career he is now pursuing.

Married, Barney and his wife, Geraldine, reside in Riverdale, N.Y. They are the parents of two grown daughters.

CHARLES THEOKAS

VICE PRESIDENT

A native of Lowell, Mass., the 32-year-old Theokas attended Lowell High School, where he starred as a center on the football team. Later he played for the University of Massachusetts and, during a two-year hitch in the Army overseas, made the All-Service team.

Following his Army discharge, Theokas went on the roster of the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League in the Fall of 1961 and on the rosters of, first, the Boston Patriots and then the New York Jets of the American Football League in 1962.

For the following four years, he served in private industry but returned to professional football in 1966 as a member of the Lowell Giants of the Atlantic Coast Football League.

In 1967, he retired as an active player to become the Lowell Giants' general manager. In 1969 he took over as vice president of the Long Island Bulls and broadened his operations to the Nets when Roy Boe, owner of the Bulls, also purchased the American Basketball Association team.

BILL THOMPSON

TICKET MANAGER

Bill Thompson has had a varied career. This is his third year in the ticket department of the New York Nets. Last Summer, he worked in the ticket department of the New York Mets.

He is a former Marine, with several citations from the Korean War. For three years he was stationed at the 1st Recruitment District Headquarters in Garden City.

Bill served as an office manager and customer relations manager for large national concerns based in New York.

He has been an AAU basketball coach and twice took New York teams to the AAU finals in Denver, Colo. While stationed at the Quantico, Va., Marine Base, he received a meritorious award for organizing and running an intra-mural sports program in football, basketball and softball for officers and enlisted men.

He was active with the Nets in their 1970 Summer Recreation Program.

Thompson hails from Davenport, Ia. He currently resides in Flushing, N.Y.

JAMES F. QUINN

VICE PRESIDENT—FINANCE

Jim Quinn is the latest member to join the staff. He comes with the highest qualifications. In the Marine Corps, in which he served for two years, he rose to the rank of captain.

In his chosen profession of accountancy, he held a highly responsible job with Touche, Ross and Co., one of the city's biggest firms, before moving over to Long Island Sports Enterprises, Inc., which encompasses the N.Y. Nets and Long Island Bulls.

Jim hails from the Bronx, where he attended Mount St. Michael's High School and, later, graduated from Fordham University School of Business.

Quinn, 29, participated in intra-mural football and baseball at Fordham, served as Class President and was chairman of Senior Week.

Jim is married to the former Jean Beyer. They have three children, James Christopher 6, Patricia Ann 5 and John Edward 3.

BERNIE (RED) SARACHEK

ASSISTANT COACH - SCOUT

Long associated with basketball, Sarachek is regarded as one of the country's finest strategists in the game.

For 25 years he served as coach at Yeshiva College, where he turned out several fine teams, despite sparse material. He retired from that post in April 1969, but continued at the institution as director of athletics, a job he still holds.

Red joined the Nets for the 1969-70, making a number of extended trips for scouting purposes. It helped set up the Nets' picks in the ABA player draft.

A native of Brooklyn, Sarachek operates one of the largest sports stores in that borough.

FRITZ MASSMAN

Fritz Massman is the new trainer of the New York Nets, succeeding Bill Norris.

Massman, 43 years old, brings 21 years of experience to the Nets' job. Born in Verona, N.J., Fritz was raised in New Rochelle, N.Y., where he played football and basketball for Iona Prep. Following his graduation from Iona, he served in the U.S. Navy, getting his discharge in the Summer of 1947.

Two years later, Massman took his first job as trainer---at Iona Prep. In the meantime he studied in the Kissimmee, Fla., school of Gus Mauch, the famed trainer of major league baseball and football teams.

After that he assumed duties at Iona College as well as at the Prep, at Columbia University, then at Brown where he moved from assistant to head man and, in 1966, at Boston College, where he held sway for four years.

For the past five years, Fritz has been District One Director of the National Athletic Trainers Association. He is also a past president of the national body.

BOB LAWRENCE

VOICE OF THE NETS

Bob Lawrence, Voice of the Nets, is a graduate of Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania.

He started his radio career as an announcer for Station WHGB in Harrisburg Pa., moved on to WKVA in Lewiston, Pa., then to WFBA in his home town of York, Pa., and six years ago, to WGBB.

As program director of WGBB, which operates out of Merrick, L.I., Lawrence was at the microphone for several of the Nets games last year.

A deep-rooted sports devotee, Lawrence has broadcast football, baseball and almost every other sport.

JOHN KRESSE

ASSISTANT COACH

A 27-year-old native of Brooklyn, Kresse played basketball at Holy Trinity High School in that borough, then matriculated at St. John's University where he was on the freshman team and, for two years, on the varsity.

In his senior year, John assisted the then coach, Joe Lapchick, to start his career. Upon receiving a B.A. from St. John's in June, 1964, Kresse took over as junior varsity basketball and baseball coach at Christ The King High School, Middle Village, L.I., staying there one year.

In 1965 he returned to St. John's where, for the first three years, he was freshman baseball coach as well as handling his basketball duties.

Reunited with Lou Carnesecca, under whom he served at St. John's for the past several years, Kresse will scout for the Nets as well as assist in coaching.

LOU CARNESECCA

HEAD COACH

In the last few years, the popular new vice-president, general manager and coach of the New York Nets of the American Basketball Association has established an international reputation as a teacher of basketball through his visits to Europe and his hosting of foreign coaches for instructional clinics. Coaches and sportswriters from many nations have been lavish in their praise of Carnesecca for his knowledge of the game and his ability to impart it to others.

A native New Yorker, Lou has been coaching for 20 years, starting at St. Ann's Academy (his alma mater) upon his graduation from St. John's University in 1950. Lou never played college basketball and was an obscure sub for his high school team. He excelled in baseball, however, and still holds the batting record, a .556 average at St. Ann's, now Archbishop Molloy High School. At St. John's he was a regular infielder for two seasons and batted over .300. Lou's high school coaching record features four National Catholic titles in basketball and one in baseball.

Following Lapchick was a tough act but Lou filled the bill. In five seasons, his St. John's teams compiled a 104-35 won-lost record for a .663 average. Each year he took the Redmen into a post-season tournament, three times into the NCAA championships and twice into the NIT at Madison Square Garden.

A colorful figure on the bench, particularly because of his diminutive size among men who tower a foot over him, Lou's involved and comic quotes are already a legend in the sports world and he is in constant demand as an after dinner speaker.

A veteran of the Coast Guard, with combat service in the Pacific, Carnesecca holds an M.A. degree from St. John's in Guidance. He and his wife Mary reside in Jackson Heights, N.Y., with teen-age daughter Enes.

Carnesecca signed a five year contract with the Nets a year ago, but true to his character, begged off until this year because he wanted to complete a commitment he had made to St. John's. That commitment ended on April 1, 1970, and he immediately took over the Nets' reins.

HISTORY OF NETS

The New York Nets are in their fourth year, actually starting as the New Jersey Americans and playing in Teaneck, N.J., Armory in 1967-68, the first season of the American Basketball Association.

They were then owned by Arthur Brown, head of the ABC Freight Forwarding Co.

Then they moved to Long Island Arena, Commack, L.I., for the 1968-69 season, changing their name to New York Nets. At the end of that season the team was sold to Roy Boe, the current owner.

Boe, a 40-year-old Yale University graduate who made his mark in the business world as a garment industry executive, moved the Nets to Island Garden, West Hempstead, for 1969-70.

With Island Garden as their base, the Nets started on the upswing, getting into the ABA playoffs for the first time and jumping 100,000 in attendance---from 42,811 at Commack to 142,812 in their new home. Counting the playoff crowds, it was 154,678.

This year, still at Island Garden, they started out by acquiring Rick Barry from the Virginia Squires, making him the first super-star in the club's history.

Barry remains the only pro player ever to lead both the NBA (1966-67) and ABA (1968-69) in scoring.

There is also a new coach, Lou Carnesecca, one of the nation's leading college tutors who left St. John's University to undertake the challenge of coaching in the pro ranks.

Carnesecca, in his 20th year as a coach, had five seasons as head man at St. John's, leading the Redmen into a post-season playoff tournament each time.

Next season the Nets hope to be in the new 15,000-seat Nassau Coliseum.

With such young up-and-coming prospects on their roster as Jim Ard, Billy Paultz and Ollie Taylor, the future indeed looks bright for the Nets.

Meet the Nets

JIM ARD
Ht. 6-9 Wt. 225 Age 22
Cincinnati '70

Ard, No. 1 draft pick of the NBA's Seattle Supersonics, was coralled by the Nets on a multi-year contract.

Jim was one of the country's top collegiate basketball players with the University of Cincinnati last Winter. With the Bearcats, he completed his college career with a total of 1,256 points, fifth in the school's all-time standings. Two of the players ahead of him are the likes of Oscar (Big O) Robertson and Jack Twyman. His career scoring average was 16.5 points.

In rebounds, Ard had a career total of 941, for an average of 12.4 per game. Last season he led Cincinnati both in scoring with 519 points (19.2 average) and 411 rebounds (15.2) average. He was the Missouri Valley Conference Player-of-the-Year both in the AP and UPI polls.

RICK BARRY
Ht. 6-7 Wt. 235 Age 26
Miami, Fla. '65

Barry, 25 years old, holds the distinction of being the only player to have won scoring titles in both the NBA and ABA. He did it with the San Francisco Warriors in '66-'67 on a 35.6 points average for NBA honors and with Oakland in '68-'69 on a 34.0 average for ABA laurels.

Upon his graduation from Miami in 1965, Barry joined the San Francisco Warriors, played with them for two years, sat out one year, and then joined the ABA as a member of the Oakland Oaks in '68-'69.

The Oaks became the Washington 'Caps last year, then changed to the Virginia Squires for this season and it was from the Squires that the Nets purchased Rick.

MANNY LEAKS
Ht. 6-8 Wt. 225 Age 24
Niagara U.

Manny Leaks, a native of Cleveland, is one of the league's leading rebounders and that's the main reason Lou Carnesecca acquired him from the Texas Chaparrals. He was averaging 11-plus rebounds per game when he joined the Nets. He also was hitting for 15 points per game.

"We needed help on the boards and Leaks looked like the man," Carnesecca says in explaining the deal for Levern Tart and Ed Johnson. He quickly proved the Nets coach right.

This is his second time around with the Nets. Manny was a member of the club in the 68-69 season. He has also played for the Kentucky Colonels in his three-year tour of duty in the ABA. As a senior at Niagara, he has sharpshooter Cal Murphy as a teammate.

OLLIE TAYLOR
Ht. 6-2 Wt. 194 Age 24
Houston U. '70

"The greatest leaper for his size I have ever seen on a basketball court."

Such is the high tribute that Lou Carnesecca, the Nets' headmaster, pays his promising rookie star, Ollie Taylor.

Though only 6-foot-2, Taylor led the University of Houston in rebounds last season with an average of 11.2 per game. He also was Houston's top scorer with a percentage of 24.7 points per game.

With Rick Barry injured in the early season and Levern Tart missing the first three games because of a death in his family, the Nets indeed were lucky to have the likes of Taylor around to get things going.

Ollie hails from the Bronx, where he attended DeWitt Clinton high school. Taylor Plays guard.

BILL MELCHIONNI
Ht. 6-2 Wt. 170 Age 26
Villanova '66

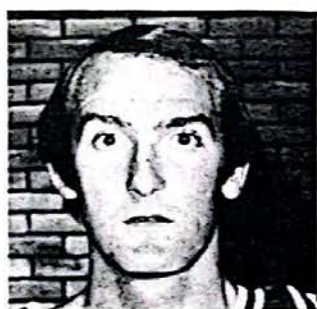

Bill Melchionni came to the Nets with two years of experience in the NBA, having played for the Philadelphia 76ers after his graduation from Villanova.

However, between his tenure with the 76ers and his stint with the Nets there was a year's lapse in which he just sat around after refusing to go to the Phoenix Suns in the NBA draft.

A master playmaker, Melchionni was ABA runnerup in assists with a 5.7 average per game.

Bill comes from Pensauken, N.J., where he was all-state for Pennsauken High. At Villanova, he was the Most Valuable Player in the 1966 National Invitation Tourney at Madison Square Garden, only one of two players in the NIT's long history to gain the honor on a team that failed to make the final round.

JEFF CONGDON
Ht. 6-2 Wt. 180 Age 27
Brigham Young

In his need for help in the backcourt, Lou Carnesecca sought out Congdon, obtaining him in a deal with the Utah Stars. There are few players better at bringing the ball up court than Congdon.

A better than average outside shot, Congdon was averaging only eight points a game with the Stars, but chiefly because he would rather pass the ball off than shoot himself. He is very fast and one of the renowned ball-stealers of the ABA. Shortly after joining the Nets, he stole the ball three straight times from his old Utah teammates to help the Nets tie the score in regulation time and beat the Stars in overtime.

Congdon played on the Brigham Young University team that won the National Invitation Tournament at Madison Square Garden in 1966.

Drafted by the Denver Rockets, he played with that team for two seasons before being acquired by Utah in a trade last summer.

SONNY DOVE

Ht. 6-8 Wt. 215

Age 24

St. Johns '68

Dove came to the Nets after two years in the NBA with the Detroit Pistons. His presence was soon felt and he was an instrumental factor in the New York ABA entry landing in the playoffs.

Sonny wound up with an average of 14.4 points per game, plus a rebounding average of close to seven per game.

At St. John's University, where he starred for three seasons, Sonny set the Redmen's all-time rebound record with a career total of 1130. He also rates high among his Alma Mater's all-time scorers.

Coach Lou Carnessecca is counting heavily on Dove for the Nets 1970-71 campaign.

LUTHER GREEN

Ht. 6-7 Wt. 195

Age 22

L.I.U. '69

In his rookie season last Winter, Green picked up valuable experience and now rates as one of the Nets' bright future bets.

Luther made an outstanding contribution in his first key effort, outplaying the Denver Rockets' mighty Spencer Hayward to help the Nets defeat the Rockets.

Green entered pro ball from LIU, where he led the Blackbirds in rebounding all three of his varsity seasons and in scoring in two of them.

With Luther as one of its mainstays, LIU went to the Little College Championship tourney one year and to the NIT the next.

Green joined the ranks of the married just before the 1969-70 season began.

JIM HAYES

Ht. 6-3 Wt. 200

Age 22

Boston U. '70

A local lad from Rockville Centre, Hayes was one of the Nets' high draft picks.

Jimmy started his career at St. Agnes in Rockville Centre, then had one year at Deerfield Academy before matriculating at Boston University.

Under the guidance of Charlie Luce of Boston U., Hayes blossomed into one of the Nation's leading intercollegiate courtmen.

His forte is driving for the basket. He is loaded with moves when headed for the nets and most difficult to stop. Jimmy is a rugged performer who should help the Nets on rebounding and defense.

Hayes never fails to visit his old school—St. Agnes—and his coach, Frank Morris, when back at Rockville Centre. It was Morris who gave him his start.

BILL PAULTZ
Ht. 6-10 Wt. 235 Age 22
St. Johns '70

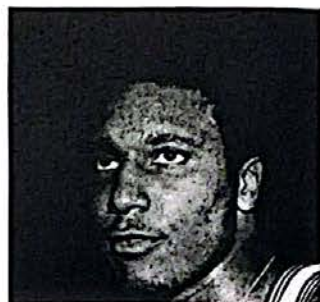

After graduating from high school in River Edge, N.J., his home town, Paultz attended Cameron State Junior College in Lawton, Oklahoma, for one year before matriculating at St. John's.

Last winter, in helping the Redmen reach the National invitation Tournament at Madison Square Garden as the team's starting center, Paultz averaged 15.5 points per game, as well as 14.5 rebounds per game. He also tied the St. John's school record of 25 rebounds in a single game set by Leroy Ellis.

Carnesecca rates Bill "a comer." "I see a fine future for him in the pros," says the Nets' new headmaster.

Bill is single. He is an ardent surfer, considering that his no. 1 hobby.

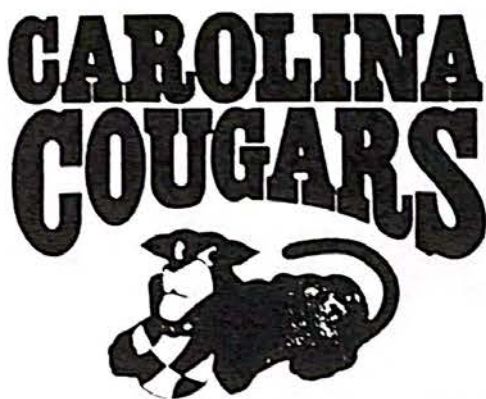

JOE DUPRE
Ht. 6-3½ Wt. 185 Age 23
St. John's U.

Joe Dupre is the latest to join forces with the Nets, thus being reunited with former St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca and former teammate Billy Paultz. "He should help us on defense," reasons Carnesecca, but Joe is also being counted on for his fine outside shot.

At St. John's Dupre averaged 15 points per game. Previously, he had starred at Westbury High School, where he made the All-Long Island and All-Met scholastic teams. In high school, too, he was all-County as a high hurdler and a pass-receiving end on the football team.

At St. John's, Joe stuck to basketball and participated in three post-season tournaments, the last being the NIT at Madison Square Garden last March, when St. John's reached the finals.

7-11

At this rate you'll never forget us.

$7 a day, 11¢ a mile.

That's Avis' new special rate. Designed to cost you less when you need a car most.

You'll find the two versions of the 7-11, listed below, at most Avis offices in the continental U.S.

Each will give you a shiny new Plymouth or other fine car. (As for gas, you only pay for what you use.)

The Avis 7-11. The low rate that lets you go first-rate.

$7 a day, 11¢ a mile. Any seven consecutive days.

This rate is for when you don't have far to go in a week, but need a car for a week.

$11 a day, 7¢ a mile. Any four consecutive days.

We switched this 7-11 around to make it better for you when you have a long way to go, but you're not going to spend a long time getting there.

Avis. We try harder.
